Summary

My research leverages carbon isotopes and biogeochemical modeling to elucidate past and present dynamics of carbon cycling. By applying carbon cycle models and regional ocean modeling systems (ROMS), I aim to advance our understanding of marine carbon dioxide removal (mCDR) methods. Specifically, my interests lie in ocean alkalinity enhancement (OAE), utilizing modeling techniques to rigorously assess its safety, efficacy, and detectability.

Education

University of California, Santa Cruz Santa Cruz, CA

PhD Earth Science 2019 - present

- Dissertation: "Advancing Marine Carbon Dioxide Removal through Ocean Alkalinity Enhancement"

University of California, Davis Davis, CA

BS Environmental Policy 2013 - 2018

- Minor in Oceanography
- Graduated with honors & a departmental citation

Research Experience

University of California Santa Cruz - Dept of Earth and Planetary Sciences Santa Cruz, CA

Co-Advisors: Dr. Mathis P. Hain, Dr. Patrick A. Rafter 2019 - Present

- Built a regional carbon cycle model and coupled to a global model to study geologic analogs of Ocean Alkalinity Enhancement (OAE) in the eastern tropical North Pacific
- Assessed the use of carbon isotopes for MRV after mCDR
- Simulated a range of OAE deployment scenarios within the California Current System using a coupled physical-biogeochemical model of ROMS and NEMUCSC, respectively

University of New South Wales - Climate Change Research Centre Sydney, NSW

Co-Advisors: Dr. Laurie Menviel, Dr. Katrin J. Meissner 2018-2019

- Analyzed seasonal sea-ice cover at the Last Glacial Maximum (LGM). Determined the most likely summer and winter sea-ice edge at the LGM and constrained the mechanisms controlling sea ice in different Earth System Models

University of California, Davis - Dept of Evolution and Ecology Davis, CA

Supervisor: Dr. Nicole M. Kollars 2018

- Assisted in various laboratory techniques, including DNA extraction, polymerase chain reaction, gel electrophoresis, and spectroscopy to investigate the genetic composition of the seagrass species.

University of California, Davis - Dept of Environmental Science and Policy Davis, CA

Supervisor: Dr. Lauren Yamane 2017

- Gathered fish life history data from surveys around the Channel Islands of California. Analyzed and identified key species characteristics, contributing to the development of models that predict species response to Marine Protected Areas (MPAs).

Professional Experience

Oceanid MRV

Oceanography Consultant June 2023 - Present

- Providing scientific expertise on ocean carbon cycling and carbonate chemistry
- Helping develop monitoring, reporting, and verification (MRV) frameworks for different marine carbon dioxide removal (mCDR) pathways
